PREFACE

Joint Pub 1-02: Department of Defense Dictionary of Military and Associated Terms defines "low intensity conflict" as:

Political-military confrontation between contending states or groups below conventional war and above the routine, peaceful competition among states. It frequently involves protracted struggles of competing principles and ideologies. Low intensity conflict ranges from subversion to the use of armed force. It is waged by a combination of means employing political, economic, informational, and military instruments. Low intensity conflicts are often localized, generally in the Third World, but contain regional and global security implications. Also called LIC.

To assist researchers in gaining a better understanding of LIC, the US Army War College Library presents Low Intensity Conflict: A Selected Bibliography. Now in its second edition, this listing provides citations for recently published books, documents, and periodical articles which are readily available in the Library's collection. Researchers may also wish to consult the previous edition, compiled June 1986, which covers similar publications received in the Library prior to that date.
